Principal's Column

Hello, Giinagay, Hai,

Ocean Day 2019

More than 850 students from fourteen Valley schools celebrated World Ocean Day in Scotts Head on Friday in recognition of the ocean as the totem of the Gumbaynggirr nation and their connection to the sea.

At Scotts Head Reserve there were cultural activities offering dreaming stories, language, dance, didgeridoo, weaving, massive sand mandalas, art murals and beach games. Gumbaynggirr people have occupied the land of Scotts Head for thousands of years forming one of the largest coastal Aboriginal nations in New South Wales. They are renowned as the 'sharing people' because their land is so rich with food. Historically they commonly shared their resources with other nations such as Dunghutti and Ngambaa.

Ocean Day offered an opportunity to take a step further towards reconciliation, gain deeper insights into shared knowledge, gather to celebrate Aboriginal cultural customs and learn more about how to contribute to ocean solutions. Taking the time to learn and experience Indigenous culture builds bridges to reconciliation.

There were environmental workshops demonstrating sustainable actions and current research and solutions for a healthy ocean presented by experts from the Southern Cross University National Marine Science Centre, the University of New England - Armidale, the Office of Environment and Heritage and Coffs Harbour and National Parks and others. This event shared key information on the effect of plastics in the sea, stormwater, recycling and more. The celebration raised awareness of the vital importance of our oceans and the role they play in sustaining a healthy planet.

The Member for Oxley and NSW Minister for Water, Property and Housing, Melinda Pavey, also attended.

Thank you to all involved especially 3rd Space Mob, our schools Deadly Voice Committee, AECG, principals, teachers, students, presenters, performers, Elders, community members, supporting businesses and organizations for making it possible for us to increase our collaborative activities to grow World Oceans Day, activate youth globally, and achieve a significant collective impact for our shared culture and ocean.

All the staff were amazing. The students behaviour and interest was outstanding.

A huge thank you to John Schmidt, Debra Bodne-Schmidt and Ricky Buchanan for their outstanding contribution in the organization and smooth running of a successful event.

Feedback from other Principals

Hi Gillian and team

Thank you for organising another highly successful Ocean Day. Our students had a ball. I can't believe how lucky you were with the weather! Well done. It was a credit to you guys to organise and manage something on such a large scale. CONGRATULATIONS

Cheers
